

Identification for driver licensing

To get or renew a driver licence, you'll need to show us some acceptable identification to confirm your identity.

Evidence of your identity

For a driver licence application, you can present:

- your New Zealand driver licence (which can be current or expired for up to two years), or
- your current New Zealand passport.

If you don't have either of these, you'll need to provide one document from table 1 and one document from table 2. One of those documents should have your photo on it, otherwise you'll need to get a declaration from an identity referee.

All documents must be originals. Photocopied or scanned documents aren't acceptable.

If your evidence of identity document isn't issued in the name currently on your driver licence

You may be required to provide additional documentation to show the link between those names (eg a birth certificate and/or a marriage certificate). See Evidence of name change over the page.

If neither document has a photo, you must also provide a passport-style photo and an identity declaration signed by an identity referee. The photo must be less than six months old.

You can go to www.nzta.govt.nz/form-DL26 to download an Identity referee declaration form (DL26).

Who can be an identity referee

Your referee must:

- have a valid New Zealand passport or New Zealand driver licence, and
- have known you for at least a year, and
- be at least 16 years old, and
- not be related to you or part of your extended family group, and
- not be your spouse or partner, and
- not live at the same address as you.

Your referee must provide their:

- passport or driver licence number
- name
- date of birth
- contact details, including a daytime phone number.

Your referee must write your full name on the back of the photo and sign and date it. The image must be a good likeness and of an equal standard to one required for a driver licence or passport application.

Note: a business that takes passport photos may supply a photo with a pre-printed label on the back.

If you're from overseas and don't have a New Zealand licence

If you're from overseas you still need to present a combination of evidence of identity documents (one primary document from table 1 and one supporting document from table 2).

If you're applying for a New Zealand driver licence for the first time, this could be your current overseas passport and your current overseas driver licence.

Evidence of name change

If your name has changed from the one on your driver licence (eg due to marriage or civil union, or you've changed your name) you'll need to provide evidence of the name change.

You'll also need to provide linking name change documents if the names on either of your forms of identification aren't the same.

You'll need to provide one of the following documents as proof of your name change. The documents must be originals, and issued in New Zealand.
